

Driving Outcomes During Rapid Change

The required transition is unprecedented. The pace of change to how health professionals are prepared is rivaled only by the changing dynamics of the information they need to face daily challenges.

The path forward, however, does not need to be muddled. Wisewire can offer simple steps to adapt rapidly and meet your learners where they are.

1

Harness your resources

What have you learned about your learners?

Understanding the knowledge, skills, and misconceptions learners are starting with is critical to moving the needle.

What outcomes are you hoping to drive? What will successful learners know and do? How will they thrive?

What do you have in your library? Think course assets, PowerPoints, expertise, and feedback that can be captured from experienced course leaders.

Strategize

What are the critical gaps between outcomes and your resources? Don't assume that all gaps are at the topic level. Higher Domains of Knowledge may need to be instructed or practiced to drive outcomes.

Don't solve every gap from scratch. High quality Open Educational Resources can propel your program forward and allow you to focus your critical resources.

3

Evolve

Where are your learners today? How are they consuming content? Virtual learning doesn't always look the same as on premise learning. What flexibility will your students need in their new setting to ensure their success?

4

Impact

Be agile, but release your learning program in digestible pieces. You don't need to solve for every objective in one release, but remember that changing steps, tasks, and navigation for learners repeatedly can be confusing.
